Leading online jeweler presents modern Palladium rings from Coge and ArtCarved

(Modesto, Calif.) September 1, 2009 – Titanium-Jewelry.com, a leading online retailer of men’s wedding bands, tungsten rings, titanium rings and unique contemporary jewelry, is proud to be at the forefront of the stylish and cost efficient precious metal palladium, with a full line of wedding, engagement and anniversary rings. An alternative to platinum with its strength and sophistication, palladium rings are priced comparable to white gold and serves as a bold and stylish choice for shoppers looking for a lasting choice in fine jewelry.

“In this economy, people are being more prudent with their dollar, looking for cost effective alternatives in every purchase,” said Ron Yates, founder, Titanium-Jewelry.com. “The jewelry market is no different and because of this we are pleased to bring a full line of Palladium wedding bands to our customers. At just one-third of the price of platinum, palladium makes a wonderful alternative boasting the same high quality and value, without breaking the bank.”

While many consumers look toward white gold as a cheaper alternative to platinum, many are not aware of some of the fundamental differences between the two precious metals. While platinum rings stand at a 95% purity level, white gold can only claim a purity level between 41%-75%. Also, because of the additions of coloring to white gold rings, fading and tarnishing can occur during the life span of the ring. Palladium, however, not only matches the strength of platinum, but also its 95% purity level and will not tarnish or fade like white gold. Unlike white gold it is also hypo-allergenic and, most importantly, at around a third of the price of platinum, it serves as one of the best metal values on the market.
